Below, our buying guide offers helpful information on everything you need to know when purchasing a new garage door. Explore our range Explore our range Explore our range Types of garage doors All of our B&D; garage doors are Australian-made and available in two types: roller doors and sectional doors. Roller garage doors Sectional garage doors Tilt doors Roller garage doors provide a practical and affordable option for garages, laneways, and storage sheds. Their design enables them to roll upwards, similar to how a carpet rolls, neatly into the space at the top of the door's entrance. This feature not only maximises the available ceiling space for lighting or additional storage but also allows vehicles to park very close to the door, efficiently utilising driveway area. These doors are available for purchase both with and without an automated opening system. They are designed for increased security, incorporating a robust key lock to deter unauthorised access. Furthermore, they are constructed to endure high winds, making them a suitable choice for regions frequently affected by cyclones. Constructed from multiple interconnected panels that give the appearance of a single, unified door, sectional garage doors are customisable to fit various shapes and sizes of garage openings. Distinct from roller doors, these doors glide along metal tracks fixed to the ceiling when they open or close. Available in an array of styles and colours, they are a favoured option for domestic settings, offering a contemporary look, robustness, and practicality. The era of physically lifting and unlocking garage doors is now obsolete. Sectional garage doors are typically bought with an automated opener, providing enhanced security. And since many garage doors do not have locks, B&D;'s automatic locking systems eliminate the need for manual locks, ensuring that access is restricted to individuals with a remote control. Tilt doors are not a common choice for garage doors, mainly due to their safety and security concerns. This is why B&D; don't produce or install tilt doors. Comprising a single, heavy piece without hinged panels, these doors have exposed springs on each side. This design can strain the springs and balance mechanism during operation. Over time, worn springs may break, causing the door to close suddenly and without warning, posing a risk to people, children, pets, and vehicles. Garage door safety and security At B&D;, our priority is to offer the highest level of safety for our customers through our garage doors. Here are the key safety features you should consider when purchasing a new garage door. Smart phone operation Control and monitor your garage door using a smartphone or tablet with our smart door operation feature . Garage Door Warranty Garage Door Warranty Garage Door Warranty AUTO LOCK™ A closed garage door doesn't necessarily mean it's secure. Our AUTO LOCK™ feature is engineered to prevent unauthorised opening by automatically engaging a heavy-duty bolt upon receiving a signal from the remote control. This eliminates the need for a key, providing enhanced security against break-ins. AUTO LOCK™ AUTO LOCK™ AUTO LOCK™ Automatic Reverse and Backdrive Each B&D; automated garage door is equipped with an Automatic Reverse function. This feature detects resistance or blockages, preventing the door from closing on objects, individuals, or valuables. Additionally, the Automatic Backdrive activates the motor to move downwards if an attempt is made to forcibly open the door. Openers and Remotes Openers and Remotes Openers and Remotes Infrared motion detection Wireless safety beams are a vital safety measure for roller and sectional garage doors. These beams, situated close to the garage door's base, detect any object in the door's path. If something is detected, the door won't close, and if the beam is interrupted, the opener reverses direction. This feature plays a crucial role in preventing accidents and injuries.
